Death Strikes Amid Alpine Beauty

An Alpine holiday on spectacular Mount Temple, colossus of the Rockies, near Banff, brought death Monday to seven American boys. A snowslide struck 11 rope-entwined lads climbing, unaccompanied high on the giant peak. Two others are seriously hurt. The other two escaped.

B.C. LAD URGES WOMAN TO PLEAD FOR MERCY

VANCOUVER (CP)—Love for his mother has prompted 13-year-old Victor Nightshades of suburban Burnaby to write a letter asking convicted slayer Ruth Ellis, a London model, to plead for mercy.

Victor read of her refusing to seek mercy, and sent his letter to the editor of a Vancouver newspaper, asking that it be forwarded to "the warden in London."

He said: "If my mother killed my father because of another woman I would still love her and would not want her to be hanged. Ask her, Ruth Ellis, to think of her children. Ask her to plead for mercy."

His mother, Mrs. Alfred Nightshades, said it was "all his own idea."

Avalanche Kills 7 Boys On Icy Peak in Rockies

Only Two Unhurt In Tragic Climb By U.S. Youths

BANFF, Alta. (CP)—Seven American boys attempting to climb one of the highest mountains in the Canadian Rockies were killed Monday when an avalanche of snow swept them down Mount Temple. Two others were injured. Two escaped.

The boys, aged 13 to 16, were caught almost 10,000 feet up the mountain while attempting what veteran alpinists termed one of the most difficult climbs in the Rockies. They had given up the climb more than 1,000 feet from the summit and had just started the return trip to their supply camp when caught in the avalanche. They were carried 300 feet.

Five bodies were found in rescue searches Monday. The RCMP announced at noon today that two other boys, previously reported missing, were dead.

The two injured boys were brought to hospital here in serious condition with head injuries.

Second Disaster Within Year

Last autumn, five mountaineers from Mexico died in a similar disaster in the same general area. That occurred on the western face of Victoria glacier above Abbott's pass—known to mountaineers as a death trap. The scene was 4½ miles distant in a direct air line from Monday's tragedy on Mount Temple.

Mount Temple dominates a valley near a railway siding called Elton, halfway between Mount Eisenhower and Lake Louise. It stands on the south side of the Bow river and is heavily wooded at the base. The peak is a fine glacier—a cornice that hangs over the north-west corner and familiar to tourists as an outstanding sight from the Banff-Jasper highway.

The 11,363-foot mountain, named in 1884 for Lord Temple, who at the time was chairman of the Royal Geographical Society and one of the first persons to visit the area, is a popular spot for alpinists. High up its steep slopes is a ski lodge where the international intercollegiate skiing championships were held last winter. The lodge is accessible by road only in winter.

Twin Brothers Among Victims

The injured boys suffered head injuries, shock and exposure. They were brought to hospital in Banff, 85 miles west of Calgary.

The dead: Richard Balis, 13, and James Balis, 13, twin brothers, William Wise, 15, and William Watts, 16, all of Philadelphia; Luther Seddon, 13, St. Louis; Miles Marble, 12, and David Chapin, 15, both of Philadelphia.

In hospital are Frederick Ballard, 13, and Jerry Clattenburg, 14, also Philadelphia residents. Peter Smith, 13, and Tony Woodfield, 16, escaped injury.

The boys climbed up to between 9,500 and 10,000 feet and found it would be impossible to go higher. They had just started the return trip when the avalanche occurred.

Snow's Force Snapped Rope

Tony Woodfield, last youth on the rope, saw the avalanche coming, dug in his axe but the force of the falling snow broke the rope and took the other 10 boys away, leaving Woodfield free at the top of the slide.

The other boy who escaped injury, Peter Smith, was second from the front. At one point he felt the rope which had been securing the boys together tighten around his neck. He pulled it free and tore himself away from the avalanche.

Six-Inch Wound on Head

One of the injured, Frederick Ballard, suffering from a six-inch gash on the top of the head, grew tired of waiting for the rescue party and started down to the supply camp. He walked some 2½ miles before meeting the first party. He was accompanied the remaining half of the distance to Moraine Lake where he collapsed.

B. I. M. Strong, Banff Park superintendent, went to Moraine Lake where he supervised rescue operations.

The boys and their leaders had been in Banff three days. Their mountain climbing experience had been limited to a sortie on Mt. Rundle on Sunday, and another climb on one of the mountains in Yellowstone National Park.

Richard and James Balis, 13-year-old twins, were the only children of Mr. and Mrs. Mark E. Balis of Chestnut Hill in suburban Philadelphia. Another son, Mark,

Dream Teams In Ball Game At Milwaukee

MILWAUKEE, Wis. (UP)—Fans started gathering six hours before game time today in perfect baseball weather for the 22nd annual major league all-star game.

There wasn't a cloud in the sky and a light Lake Michigan breeze tempered the blazing sun's rays. The temperature was in the mid-70's with a 10-mile-an-hour wind blowing in from the east.

Numerous fans arrived at the stadium as early as 8 a.m., although all tickets had been sold weeks ago and the gates didn't open until 11 a.m. The early arrivals had their tickets, and some of them said they just didn't want to miss anything.

WATER BOARD ACTS

Fluoridation For Nanaimo Without Vote

Special to The Times

NANAIMO—Greater Nanaimo Water Board has advised city council that the district will be fluoridated.

C. F. Newcombe, chief of the board, said an extensive investigation has failed to show any valid reason why fluoridation should not take place.

His report said "A mandate of the people in the various districts is not possible as there is no provision in the Water Act for taking of mandate for those districts organized under it."

"In view of the recommendations received in writing from Canadian and U.S. dental associations, Canadian and U.S. Medical Association, the Research Council of the Province of Alberta and the Department of Health and Welfare of B.C., and many other organizations, combined with the fact that no member of the water board was qualified to refute the endorsement seems to point clearly to the decision that Nanaimo should not bog down in what has been termed by medical men here as 'senseless discussion of a matter important to the health generally of people in Nanaimo and district.'"

"He's of the opinion our job is to provide pure water and protect it against infection. He advises that (in the event of an affirmative plebiscite) we should get the act changed and have authority written in which would permit fluoridation."

IN PRELIMINARY REPORT

Canadian Mayors Approve Fluorides

The question of fluoridation was tabled again by city council Monday to await further information compiled for the Canadian Federation of Mayors and Municipalities.

It is expected to arrive before council's next business session, September 8.

Meanwhile, a preliminary report by that national body was received and filed. It gives unqualified support to the health measure.

The preliminary study was made by the Health League of Canada, fluoridation committee, based on replies to questionnaires submitted to heads of department of preventative medicine of 92 North American Universities.

The report ends with a resolution by the Health League as follows:

"Resolved that in view of the overwhelming mass of evidence received by our committee on fluoridation from all over North America emphasizing the importance of fluoridation of communal water supplies for the prevention of caries and also of overwhelming evidence the effect that fluoridation in approved quantities does no harm to the human organism, this association... immediately goes on record as endorsing, without qualification, the fluoridation of communal water supplies in quantities recommended by official departments of health."

Of the preventative medicine departments queried, 96 endorsed fluoridation, six said they were not qualified to express an opinion at the moment. None said fluoridation would not prevent caries and none expressed an opinion that fluoridation in proper quantities would harm the human organism.

The mayor last month threatened to veto a move by council to approve a recommendation by the Victoria-Esquamalt Union Board of Health for fluoridation of local drinking water.

Council decided not to press the issue until the reports of the mayors' group was at hand. Mayor Harrison said the federation was undecided on the matter.

Vancouver General Hospital authorities reported today that Cuthbert's condition is "good."

At the preliminary session of the royal commission a week ago, Lawrence Hill, barrister, appeared for Cuthbert and said that he expected the detective would undergo psychiatric examination. A few days later Hill announced that he would not appear on Cuthbert's behalf.

Defence Bill Wind-Up Clears Way to End Session By Next Week

(From CP and BUP Dispatches)

The long Commons dispute over defence production powers has ended with a compromise closing the gap that divided the chamber through 10 days of bitter debate.

Prime Minister St. Laurent announced Monday, as the matter came up for the 11th day, that the government had agreed to put a three-year time limit on some of the wide powers of Defence Production Minister Howe.

Opposition leader Drew said the proposal "substantially meets all the demands we have made."

Leaders of other opposition groups happily assented and the House passed in 30 minutes the measure that had been held up by an off-and-on filibustering debate which began June 7. Its passage cleared the way for an end to the session, perhaps by the end of next week.

As passed, the bill provides that nine sections in the act containing its broadest powers will expire July 31, 1959, thus forcing the government in power then to seek renewal if it wants them continued.

PRIVATE MEETING

The compromise was reached in a private meeting between Mr. St. Laurent and Mr. Drew, supplemented by later telephone conversations including a week-end call between Ottawa and the prime minister's summer home at St. Patrick, Que., and another after Mr. St. Laurent returned to the capital at noon Monday.

The official opposition had made 77 of the 106 speeches in the marathon debate. Two of them by Mr. Drew totalled about eight hours.

Social Credit leader Low said the government had shown courage in facing up to opposition demands and finding a common-sense solution to a difficult impasse.

CCF leader Coldwell said he was "very happy indeed." His party had supported the principle of the bill but felt there should be a time limit on some of the powers.

Social Credit leader Low said Monday the railways don't seem to realize it but they are cutting their own throats by rate-cutting on freight haulage.

He said that the publicly-owned CNR last December cut its freight rate to $1.50 from $2.44 a hundredweight on certain goods from Vancouver to Dawson Creek, B.C., via Edmonton.

The new rate was introduced to destroy, not meet, truck competition over British Columbia's new Hart Highway into the Peace River region from Prince George. The rail route was 800 to 850 miles longer than the trucking distance.

But the regular rate from Vancouver to Grande Prairie, 90 miles less than from Vancouver to Dawson Creek, remained at $2.44. Shippers then found they could ship goods by carload into Dawson Creek, haul them back to Grande Prairie and save 59 cents a hundredweight.

Transport Minister Marler said Monday night the government has no intention of curbing newspapers' practice of listening to police radio calls, provided police have no objection.

He replied to suggestions by Donald Fleming (PC-Toronto-Eglinton) that amendments to the Radio Act would make it illegal for newspapers to use such police broadcasts as tips on crimes and accidents.

The amendments provide penalties of six months in jail and/or a $500 fine for making unauthorized use of radio communications transmitted by stations other than commercial radio stations.

The amendments were given Commons approval.

Bennett Defence of Road Policy Sparked by Times' Editorial

By way of reply to an editorial in The Times of Monday, Premier W. A. C. Bennett Monday defended his government's highway program.

Premier Bennett said the editorial, which was entitled "Roads on Paper," was an example of "carping criticism of a slanted Liberal newspaper."

The Times' editorial said B.C. does not have a main highway across B.C., "worthy of the name." The premier commented: "We know our roads are not perfect; that's one reason why the old government was kicked out of office three years ago."

He said the editorial gave the impression that the government was spending its money on giant toll bridges, at the expense of roads, and said "not one cent" of highway money has been used for toll bridges.

"When this government took office we had no decent highways in the province," he said.

He said the federal government's highway expenditures from the spring of 1952 to the end of the current fiscal year in March, 1956, four years, will amount to $209,447,137, compared to $196,108,516 in the previous 21 years.

Under questioning, the premier admitted his figures included, for the current fiscal year alone, "five or six millions" of federal aid on the Trans-Canada Highway.

He said the provincial government will have a road system by 1962 "which will compare favorably with any province in Canada," without borrowing.

En Garde! It's Magnificent

IN that engaging informality you find at a summer camp, an erudite college pro might give us a demonstration of fencing. There were no swords, no seconds. He was, with excellent pantomime, presenting his impressions of an acrobatic actor in "Scaramouche."

"Wonderful," he said, as he parried an imaginary thrust from a non-existent opponent. "Magnificent," as he made his own lunge, and the shack shook to its foundations. "I only wish I knew something about it."

Ever since Alexander Dumas brought swordplay to dramatic and fictional heights, I guess every literate boy has been d'Artagnan in some form or other—and men have remained young boys at heart by remembering.

Yet, widely appreciated as swordplay may be in a literary sense, very few people today seem to know much about it. You noticed that at the Empire Games in Vancouver last year. Fencing formed one section of the program. But it drew only moderate crowds—so moderate that a high school gym was big enough to accommodate the spectators.

If you happened to go to one of the exhibitions from curiosity, you'd have been surprised to find how many others had gone for the same reason.

'NAWTHING' APPEN

On the gym floor you saw contestants facing each other along a strip of canvas that might have been a yard wide. Superstition was four officials and a head judge or referee. At a signal, one of the competitors attacked. The other defended himself. It stayed that way until the attacker had made some gesture, a sort of final move. A shout went up from the officials. The referee or judge in chief hustled from one to another of the officials conferred in clipped phrases with each in turn and then usually faced the spectators, beamed a large smile and said: "Nawthing 'appen." Then the other contestant attacked.

So you said to somebody next to you: "Pardon my ignorance, but what's going on?"

And the neighboring spectator looked a little startled and said "Epees."

You said, "Sure, but what's it all about? How do they score?"

And your neighbor probably said, "I'm just visiting. Ask that fellow in the light blue blazer, only don't bother him now, he's working."

So having seen some of the best fencers in the Commonwealth, you went away puzzled, struck poses with an imaginary sword, did little dance steps back and forth with your left hand over your head like Highland Fling, and stopped to explain: "Nawthing 'appen."

Still, it didn't matter. Swordplay is for Dumas, Sabatini and the motion pictures. There it's wonderful, magnificent, just as the college professor said. And part of its wonder and magnificence, I think, lies in the appeal of the books for those who are, again like the college professor, incurably romantic.

WHAT WAS IT LIKE?

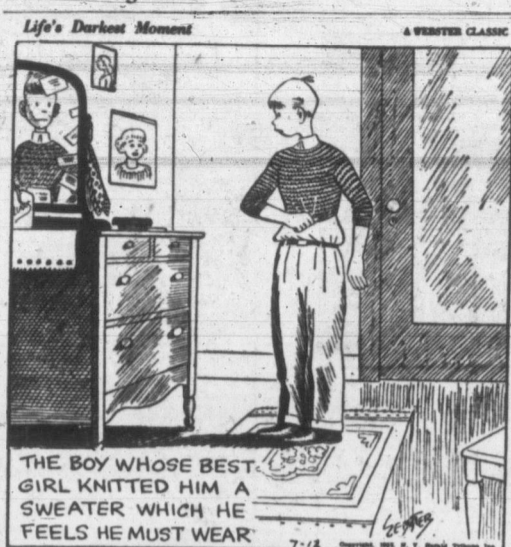

I suppose, if it came down to actualities, the old days of the sabre and the rapier must have been, not too far removed from the slaughter house. I suppose a man who was more than competent with such weapons and who had the wrong kind of disposition was just as much a bully as his less elegant counterpart was with a bludgeon.

But the writers made it look different. The winners' swords, as I recollect my adventure reading, were always raised in the cause of chivalry. And very seldom was it that militant chivalry bested.

My professor friend agrees with me on that point. When I suggested to him that it was a little difficult to understand how one hero with a sword could put to dozen opponents to flight in a crowd scene and then have all he could do to dispatch one lonely villain near the end of the piece, he had a reply for that, too.

"Look," he said, "you're expecting consistency in this thing. This, my friend, is art. Art never has depended and never will have to depend on consistency. Just read the books again. You'll find them quite as good as when you were a boy."

Maybe I will. I'm getting a little tired of reading the modern books of adolescence. Kids aren't as nasty as some present-day writers paint them between the lurid covers of a paperback.

Half-Hour Parking For Broad Street

A turnabout move by city council Monday passed an amendment to the Streets Traffic and Regulation By-law which will see five-cent, half-hour parking meters installed on both sides of Broad Street between Cormorant and Broughton.

The move had been approved June 10, but June 23 council referred the resolution back to public works committee.

Public works returned the recommendation to council. This time it passed.

The boost in parking rates was brought in by Ald. M. H. Mooney upon receipt of a petition by Broad Street merchants who felt the system would discourage meter hogs and keep traffic moving. He had also asked that fines for over-parking in metered spaces be boosted from $1 to $2.50, but council rejected that too and it has not yet been reintroduced.

City Hitch-Hiker Girls at Dauphin

Two hitch-hiking Victoria girls reached Dauphin, Man., today en route to Churchill, Man., where they will spend the summer studying bird and plant life.

They are Elizabeth Hatfield, 24, a piano teacher, 741 Fort, and accountant Norma Haas, 23.

The girls took four days to reach Brandon from Vancouver and another day to reach Dauphin. They plan to thumb their way to The Pas and then go by train to Churchill, 610 miles north of Winnipeg.

The plucky pair are lugging 25-pound packs which include food, clothing, sleeping bags and extra lipstuck.

Gardening Develops Good Habits

Just once in my life I heard the flower shows that the essence of friendliness, which could easily be a synonym for selfishness, is to be found. To be sure there is rivalry, but it is in a friendly spirit. And as a visitor, you will always find someone who is ready and able to part with some first-hand knowledge or a few good growing tips.

This week's flower show is being held Wednesday in the hall of St. David's-by-the-Sea, Cordova Bay. Go there, and you'll see what I mean.

In the first place, there are fortunately few gardeners who grow plants exclusively for their own pleasure. Most of us welcome visitors, and the criticism which often is handed out is usually borne with good spirit.

Those who admire, either in the flower or in the vegetable garden, frequently receive a small gift, for it is the gardener's joy to share.

To my mind, however, it is at

LONDON LETTER

By WALLACE REYBURN

Arctic Submarine Route

LONDON—No kid grows up without learning about the Northwest Passage and the attempts through history to get from the Atlantic to the Pacific by sea across the top of Canada. Well, apparently big navy minds are at work here trying to figure out how it can be done under the sea—not on the sea—by submarine.

Three years ago Lieut.-Commander David Scott of the Royal Navy volunteered to try the Northwest Passage by submarine. But instead he was told to cross the Atlantic under water, which he did with great success in the submarine Andrew, as you probably remember.

As far as we know (unless it's a well-kept secret) the trip hasn't yet been attempted and likewise the other top-of-the-world route from Europe to the Pacific—the Northeast Passage across the top of Russia—has yet to be attempted by the British.

But it is no secret that both these submarine routes are being given a lot of thought. Their chief value is the time-saving factor. It would be eight days quicker to go round the north coast of Russia than by the routes used now.

What brings this matter into the news is publication of a book called Arctic Submarine (Elek) by Alastair Mars, who was a wartime sub commander. It's the story (fictional but with the ring of truth) of a World War II submarine which is converted for the purpose and sent on the trip as a peace-time experiment. If you are fond of the Jules Verne type of thing—subs in winter on that route would have to navigate under ice up to 40 feet thick—then this is your meat.

And, like so much of Jules Verne, it is fiction that is likely to become fact. Navy men here feel that both the Northeast and Northwest Passages are feasible for submarines—in the summer.

IF YOU SUFFER from insomnia you might well give a thought to cows. They never get a good night's sleep throughout their whole lives, poor dears. It's connected with their system of digestion. They can't lie down on their side for more than a minute or two, or the stomach can't work properly. So they can only sit down to rest and they must keep their heads up. It's that darn old of theirs that has to be chewed. All night long it's chew, chew, chew, and though a cow may close its eyes drowsily for a little while it never loses consciousness.

All these are the findings of dairying researcher Dr. Clive Balch, who has tried many a time to creep up on a cow unseen and unheard and hasn't been able to do it yet. He's had breathing apparatus on cows at the Dairying Research Institute in Reading to see how much they do of the deep breathing that accompanies sleep. But with their jaws going constantly they can never get down to the job of slow, deep breathing and Dr. Balch says: "Observation of cows over long periods discloses no loss of consciousness."

YOU'LL SOON BE ABLE to see Sabrina, the girl who is Britain's answer to Marilyn Monroe. She has been rushed into a new film called Stock Car. In the movie she will do much the same as she has been doing on TV—just be on view and open her mouth as little as possible. The advent of Sabrina in films has caused someone to remark: "The big thing about Sabrina is her acting. It's her forte. Her bust is only 39½."

MARILYN BELL'S CHANNEL SWIM DIARY

Curtsey Tried in Nightie; She Falls Flat

FOLKESTONE — Sunday was a quiet day. I went to church in the morning and swam at the pool in the afternoon. Or I tried to swim. It was so crowded you could hardly move.

It was a hot day even if the sun was only out every now and then. I had dinner in my room with mother and Joan Cooke. We ordered hot beef sandwiches.

George, our little waiter, didn't know what a hot beef sandwich was but the hotel had said if we wanted anything and they didn't know what it was just describe it.

I don't know why I always call George the little waiter. He must be six feet two but I guess it is because he is about my age. Anyway, we told him how to make a hot roast beef sandwich and he went to the kitchen to get it.

He came back with the sandwich but he said the chef said to him, "George, why do you always drive me up the wall."

Each before a two or three-hour swim. We were over at Dover by nine o'clock.

It was cloudy but warm. Capt. Burwell had promised to come with us and he was waiting for us. So was Bill, the boatman. By the time we got outside the harbor the sun had come out and the water was really smooth.

Pop Burwell said there wasn't any tide. We swam along the cliffs, away from Dover this time. There were a lot of black oil posts sticking up in the water in front of me, but I am getting used to the place now and that sort of thing doesn't bother me so much.

Mr. Burwell said it was the wreck of a five-masted schooner from Germany. The wind had run it there in 1910 but nobody was drowned. It was one of the largest sailing vessels ever built. I was enjoying swimming in the sun. The water seemed warmer. I thought about my letter that morning. It was from Maria Brenk, my girl-friend and it was big and fat. I thought, she's a real doll to write me such a fat letter.

Then when I opened it I found it was a clipping from the newspaper telling how Father Donegan was going to try to swim the Strait of Juan de Fuca. She scribbled a note along the side about how she was going to write a letter soon. I hope she does.

I thought about Karen, too. She was accepted as a model at the CNE. I'm so glad. Now we'll both be at the CNE.

She really is a good kid and I miss her. She looked so cute that night we left at the Toronto Flying Club. She was wearing a new dress she bought herself. She had made some money modelling and she was going to buy several dresses, but she said to mother, let's spend it all on one good dress. So she did and that was the one she wore to the airport. She has such good taste, much better than mine, I'm sure.

Snap Out of Dream

I got thinking all these things and wishing it was time for Karen and Daddy to come over when I suddenly remembered I was swimming and Mr. Burwell and Gus were watching me. Everybody in the boat was getting warm and peeling off in the sun.

Jack had even taken his shirt off. He was sitting in the bow of the boat not paying any attention so I speeded up and when I got even with him I really splashed.

You should have seen him jump. You'd think I'd hit him with a board. He shook his fist at me.

We were swimming right along the cliffs and you can look up and see the listening posts and the searchlights. I couldn't until I stopped swimming and looked up.

The posts look like ears and they are attached to a big radar station there.

One of the searchlights went on as we passed and it really must be powerful because you could see it across the water in that bright sunlight.

Bill says a man who lives up there has to test them every morning to see if they are all right.

Of course I learned all these things after I stopped swimming because I don't stop when I'm training unless something frightens me or my goggles leak.

I swam right along the cliffs and around back in the harbor to the jetty. I had the tide with me going back because it had started to come in again so I was able to make good time.

I wasn't cold at all when I came out. I'd been in about two and a half hours. Mr. Burwell said to me, "You're a good swimmer and if you go on like that it's in the bag." I don't know about the swim being in the bag but I do know I'm feeling a lot better about it than I did.

DAVY CROCKETT IN BAD WITH FAMED SGT. FRIDAY

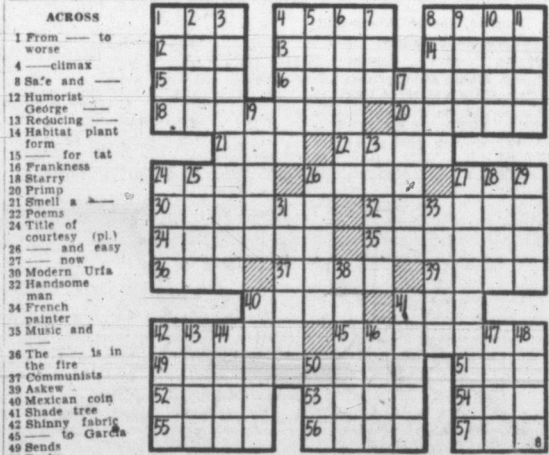

LOS ANGELES (AP)—"I'm Sergeant Friday," said the motorcycle officer to the motorist.

"And I'm Davy Crockett," said the driver.

They were, too! Sgt. Lester Friday and David W. Crockett, 20.

"We sure have it rough, don't we?" sighed Crockett.

Sgt. Friday nodded and sighed, too, but just the same he wrote out the ticket for running through a red light.

ARTS CENTRE'S GRANT NEARER REALIZATION

Greater Victoria Arts Centre came a step closer to getting its promised $3,100 city grant Monday as council gave third reading to the controversial by-law.

An 11th-hour amendment by Ald. Don Smith which would have reduced the grant to $2,000 (the amount of annual taxes) failed to pass.

Mayor Claude Harrison said later that as far as he is concerned the by-law will be open to amendment until finally passed. Final passing is slated for next council meeting, September 8.

Junior Fish Derby Set for Wednesday

Annual Ogden Point Fishing Frolic
Sponsored By Eight City Playgrounds

"Anything goes" in the line of fishing equipment at the annual children's fishing derby, sponsored by eight city playgrounds, at Ogden Point breakwater Wednesday afternoon.

Prizes donated by local sporting goods stores will be awarded for the first six fish caught, according to weight.

The derby is open to all children in Greater Victoria.

"Those interested should meet me at the breakwater at 1:30," said playgrounds director Gordon Hartley. "Trained supervisors will patrol the breakwater during the derby. No boats or rafts will be allowed."

He warned that children must stay away from the Ogden Point wharves and loading areas.

Friday, 20 bouts at all weights will be fought in the playgrounds boxing championships at Oaklands Park.

"Last year Oaklands dominated the meet, but this time we have strong contenders, especially from James Bay and Banfield Parks," Hartley said.

Four parks will close this week in order to allow Burnside, Quadra Heights, Stadacona and Redfern parks to open. There will be daily supervision from 1:30 to 5 p.m.

Parks closing are Oaklands, James Bay, Banfield and Hollywood.

VANCOUVER (BUP)—Five local theatres operated by the Famous Players chain will close because of too much competition from television, F. H. Gow, British Columbia general manager of the chain, said Monday.

Their attendance has dropped 50 per cent this year.

Gow predicted that television soon will force all small theatres out of business.

Council Split On Auditorium

Motion to Approach Committee
On Capital Grant Tied, Lost

City Council adopted a "hands off" policy Monday on the use of the annual Capital City Grant to build a civic auditorium.

A split vote defeated a finance committee request that the Capital City Grant Committee be asked to consider the question of using its funds for construction of an auditorium, with report to city council.

Premier W. A. C. Bennett recently said the city should take its auditorium plans to the grants committee.

OPPOSED BY MAYOR
Mayor Claude Harrison opposed the move by the finance committee with the warning that tampering with the grant would "kill the goose that laid the golden egg."

Ald. M. H. Mooney and Ald. Austin Curtis also sided with the mayor and Ald. Arthur Dowell said, "I can't support this."

Ald. Brent Murdoch was absent for the vote but had stated earlier that the grant should not be touched. He thought it would jeopardize chances of ever getting an adequate grant in lieu of taxes on provincial property.

Ald. Don Smith, Ald. W. F. Pinfold, Ald. Geoffrey Edgell and Ald. Robert Macmillan wanted to investigate the premier's offer. A tie vote resulted and was declared lost by the mayor.

EPSTEIN MARRIES MODEL

LONDON (UP)—Sir Jacob Epstein, New York-born sculptor, whose work always has aroused controversy, married his model in secret last week and sailed for the United States without her the next day. The London Daily Mail reported today. He is 76, she 30.

The newspaper said Epstein's bride is Mrs. Kathleen Garman, a friend of 30 years, who served him as secretary and posed for many of his best-known works.

Art Gallery Draws Biggest Crowd for Watercolor Show

One of the largest crowds in the history of the Art Gallery of Greater Victoria turned out Sunday afternoon when an exhibition of water colors by Britain's Sir William Russell Flint was formally opened by P. A. Gibbs, M.L.A.

Stressing the value of such exhibitions for Victoria children as well as adults, Mr. Gibbs expressed the hope that the City Council, having approved a gallery grant this year of $3,100, would proceed without delay to pass an enabling by-law which would assure the grant.

Touching on the need in Victoria for the gallery's projected fireproof wing, which would house local collections and bring new unobtainable collections to the city, Mr. Gibbs urged his audience to do all they can to see that it becomes a reality as soon as possible.

Gay Italian-Made Sandals
Put Flowers on Your Toes

By PENNY SAVER

Feel carefree and summery by wearing appropriate clothes to put you in the mood for fun. Gaiety is contagious. Wear something frivolous and bright, and right away you feel like a million, and ready for anything that comes. To bring attention to your feet and to brighten up the run-of-the-mill type of summer sandal, come see the terrific buys I saw in town. Italian-made sandals with just a few straps, and fanciful flowers or fringed material are on sale, at a greatly reduced price. One type is of white leather with two pink raffia flowers to spark up the appearance. The graduated, semi-wedge heel is made of cork, for an interesting touch. Another pair is tan, with brown denim-like material on the front.

Dotted on this frontpiece are tiny red flowers, and a fringe. Still another pair is also in tan, with a shredded fibre forming the front piece, and giving a wheat-effect. Regularly priced at $10.95 and $12.95, they're now $7.29.

Interested in weaving? For the small-scale hobbyists, I've found a multi-shape loom, complete with six extension pieces, four right angle pieces, six wide angle pieces, a shuttle, a needle and 16 screws and wing nuts. It's a 16-section loom that can be used to make place mats, dollies, luncheon sets, vanity sets and is adaptable for fashions, crafts and household articles. You'll love it, it's made of metal and costs $3.95 complete.

You'd be surprised at the numbers of articles made of or partly made of foam rubber.

AS WE LIVE

Post-Graduate Laziness
Only Temporary Reaction

By ELIZABETH B. HURLOCK, PhD

After graduating, many students are physically and nervously exhausted from the strain and excitement of their last days in school. Parents should recognize this and not expect too much too soon. That is the advice I am giving the father who wrote:

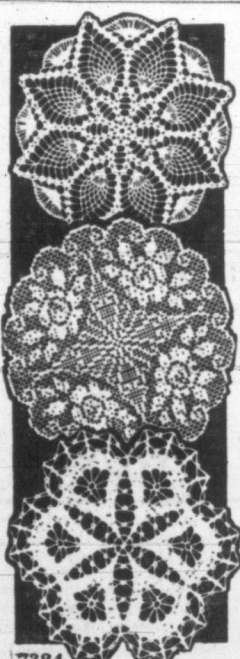

Hurlock

(Q)—"Our daughter graduated from high school last week. Since then, all she has done is sleep late in the mornings, go out to some party or other in the afternoon and then have dates in the evening. She is going to college in the fall and I want her to help her mother with the home this summer. My wife has not been too well this last year, but she has been working hard, in spite of how she feels, to spare our daughter from housework so she could study and get ready for college. For the past month, she has been going to parties at school and with her friends. This has meant late hours and extra work for my wife. I think it is time now for our daughter to give her mother a rest and help her more with the work. When I talk to her about this, she complains that none of the other girls have to miss the fun by working at home. Are all young people thoughtless and selfish today?"

(A)—Most teenagers of today, as was true when you and your wife were teenagers, are self-centered. They feel that the world revolves around them and this is encouraged by all the fuss and excitement that marks the end of their school careers. Give your daughter a week or so more to get rested from the strain of graduating and let her have some fun with her friends before they all begin to settle down to summer jobs or work they will do from now on. Then you will find that your daughter will not be on the go all the time and will be willing to help more in the home.

It is quite usual for students to have a round of parties to "celebrate" the end of their school days. But, this lasts only a short time and then you will find that more serious matters begin to claim their time and attention. Then your daughter will be less occupied with her friends and will begin to realize that she owes something to her family for making these good times possible. Be patient and things will work out all right for you.

TODAY'S RECIPE

STRAWBERRY CREAM-CHEESE PIE

One quart box strawberries, 4-6 tablespoons sugar, 6 ounces cream cheese (1½ 4 ounce packages), 3 tablespoons cream, 2 tablespoons sugar, 1 teaspoon grated orange rind, 1 9-inch baked pastry shell.

Wash, drain, hull, and slice strawberries. Stir in the 4 to 6 tablespoons sugar and chill about 1 hour. Combine the cream cheese, cream and the 2 tablespoons sugar and beat with a rotary beater until smooth and fluffy. Then stir in the grated orange rind. Spread about ¾ of the cheese mixture in the bottom of the pastry shell and cover with a layer of strawberries. Place the remaining cheese mixture in the centre, and the rest of the berries around it. Yield: six to eight servings.

Tunics, Hip Belts Shown for the Autumn

NEW YORK (AP)—Fall fashions fit to a "T"—the tunic, the tube and the torso.

New York designers, preparing to unveil fall collections to the fashion press next week, have a bag of new tricks up their collective sleeve, destined to start the customers running to the shops when the first of the new fall clothes show up about August.

Though hip belts are standard in every collection, waistlines have not been forgotten. The slim, fluid look of the new silhouette is more flattering to most women than the nipped-in look of the last year. Bustlines are with us, also—not unduly exaggerated, as sometimes was true of yore, but subtly curved and definitely feminine.

Slim lines are almost universal for daytime, with the costume of sheath dress and co-ordinated jacket, or full-length coat, the one most important outfit of the new season.

Jackets go to all lengths, from the briefest of boleros to long tubular coats, over slim matching skirts or dresses. The tunic silhouette also is prominent in all important collections in both suits and dresses.

WHY GROW OLD?

By JOSEPHINE LOWMAN

'Make Him Happy'—To Ease
Your Husband's Pressures

The number of widows increases every year. This is due to the fact that life expectancy has increased and more folks are living longer. Also, the life expectancy for a woman is longer than that for a man.

There have been many theories as to why women live longer than men. One of the main ones is that a man lives under more pressure. This may seem untrue to many women who work from dawn to late evening, taking care of their children and creating a healthful and pleasant home atmosphere. However, while the woman's task may be harder in some ways, except in crucial times, she is not under the same kind of pressure her husband is.

The rapidly and ever increasing number of widows makes it necessary to think in these terms. Are you protecting your husband from as much stress and strain as possible or do you sometimes sabotage his energy by emotionalism and a critical attitude?

I know, you too could use understanding and maybe more appreciation and affection than is expressed in words. We will talk about that another day. Today, I would like to emphasize in your mind the fact that your bread winner is under great pressure, more than you can know unless you too, have been appreciation, a bit more tolerance and humor, will be happily surprised by the results.

Today, a wife should give serious consideration to how hard her husband is driving himself, or how hard she is driving him. And while a wife should be interested in and helpful to her husband's work, she should make it known to him that she values him as a person, regardless of his earning capacity.

Death Strikes Amid Alpine Beauty

B.C. LAD URGES WOMAN TO PLEAD FOR MERCY

VANCOUVER (CP)—Love for his mother has prompted 13-year-old Victor Nightingale of suburban Burnaby to write a letter asking convicted slayer Ruth Ellis, a London model, to plead for mercy.

Victor read of her refusing to seek mercy, and sent his letter to the editor of a Vancouver newspaper, asking that it be forwarded to "the warden in London."

He said: "If my mother killed my father because of another woman I would still love her and would not want her to be hanged. Ask her, Ruth Ellis, to think of her children. Ask her to plead for mercy."

His mother, Mrs. Alfred Nightingale, said it was "all his own idea."

Avalanche Kills 7 Boys On Icy Peak in Rockies

Only Two Escape In Tragic Climb By U.S. Youths

BANFF, Alta. (CP)—Seven American boys attempting to climb one of the highest mountains in the Canadian Rockies were killed Monday when an avalanche of snow swept them down Mount Temple. Two others were injured. Two escaped.

The boys, aged 13 to 16, were caught almost 10,000 feet up the mountain while attempting what veteran alpinists termed one of the most difficult climbs in the Rockies. They had given up the climb more than 1,000 feet from the summit and had just started the return trip to their supply camp when caught in the avalanche. They were carried 300 feet.

Five bodies were found in rescue searches Monday. The RCMP announced at noon today that two other boys, previously reported missing, were dead.

The two injured boys were brought to hospital here in serious condition with head injuries and suffering from shock.

Second Disaster Within Year

Last autumn, five mountaineers from Mexico died in a similar disaster in the same general area. That occurred on the western face of Victoria glacier above Abbott's pass—known to mountaineers as a death trap. The scene was 4½ miles distant in a direct air line from Monday's tragedy on Mount Temple.

Mount Temple dominates a valley near a railway siding called Eldon, halfway between Mount Eisenhower and Lake Louise. It stands on the south side of the Bow river and is heavily wooded at the base.

Its peak is a fine glacier—a cornice that hangs over the north-west corner and familiar to tourists as an outstanding sight from the Banff-Jasper highway.

The 11,363-foot mountain, named in 1884 for Lord Temple, who at the time was chairman of the Royal Geographical Society and one of the first persons to visit the area, is a popular spot for alpinists. High up its steep slopes is a ski lodge where the international intercollegiate skiing championships were held last winter. The lodge is accessible by road only in winter.

Twin Brothers Among Victims

The injured boys suffered head injuries, shock and exposure. They were brought to hospital in Banff, 85 miles west of Calgary.

The dead: Richard Balis, 13, and James Balis, 13, twin brothers, of Wase, Wis., and William Watts, 16, all of Philadelphia; Luther Seddon, 13, St. Louis; Miles Marble, 12, and David Chapin, 15, both of Philadelphia.

In hospital are Frederick Ballard, 13, and Jerry Clattenburg, 14, also Philadelphia residents. Peter Smith, 13, and Tony Woodfield, 16, escaped injury.

The 11 boys, members of the Wilderness Club of Philadelphia, were part of a group of about 30 boys which had been in the area for three days. O. D. Dickenson and W. H. Oeser, both of Philadelphia, are camp leaders.

The group, in Canada for about a week, had its base camp at the Moraine Lake camp grounds. Monday afternoon 24 boys, accompanied by Mr. Oeser, went up to the supply camp 3,000 feet up on Mt. Temple.

Eleven of the boys decided they would like to go higher before calling it a day and were granted permission by Mr. Oeser.

The boys climbed up to between 9,500 and 10,000 feet and found it would be impossible to go higher. They had just started the return trip when the avalanche occurred.

Rescuers said only one boy died instantly, the others being victims of multiple injuries as well as exposure in bitter cold weather.

Word was sent to Moraine Lake chalet where Chief Warden Woodworth organized the first rescue party of seven men which left at 7:15 Monday night. A two-man crew followed less than two hours later.

Smith and Woodfield made their way down to the supply camp and guided Mr. Oeser back to the scene. The injured were made as comfortable as possible until help could be reached.

There wasn't a cloud in the sky and a light Lake Michigan breeze tempered the blazing sun's rays. The temperature was in the mid-70's with a 10-mile-an-hour wind blowing in from the east.

Numerous fans arrived at the stadium as early as 8 a.m., although all tickets had been sold weeks ago and the gates didn't open until 11 a.m. The early arrivals had their tickets, and some of them said they just didn't want to miss anything.

WATER BOARD ACTS

Fluoridation For Nanaimo Without Vote

Special to The Times

NANAIMO—Greater Nanaimo Water Board has advised city council that the water supplied Nanaimo and district will be fluoridated.

C. F. Newcombe, chief of the board, said an extensive investigation has failed to show any valid reason why fluoridation should not take place.

His report said "A mandate of the people in the various districts is not possible as there is no provision in the Water Act for taking of mandate for those districts organized under it."

"In view of the recommendations received in writing from Canadian and U.S. dental associations, Canadian and U.S. Medical Association, the Research Council of the Province of Alberta and the Department of Health and Welfare of B.C., and many other organizations, combined with the fact that no member of the water board was qualified to refute the endorsement seems to point clearly to the decision that Nanaimo should not bog down in what has been termed by medical men here as 'senseless discussion of a matter important to the health generally of people in Nanaimo and district.'"

WATER BOARD HERE LACKS AUTHORITY

In Victoria today, D. I. Lachlan, Greater Victoria Water District commissioner, said "I don't think we'd take such a drastic step (as to fluoridate city water without a referendum). We just do what we're told."

He said the board's solicitor had advised that the act governing the GVWD "doesn't say you can't do it—but it doesn't say we can. Nanaimo's act may be different."

"He's of the opinion our job is to provide pure water and protect it against infection. He advises that (in the event of an affirmative plebiscite) we should get the act changed and have authority written in which would permit fluoridation."

IN PRELIMINARY REPORT

Canadian Mayors Approve Fluorides

The question of fluoridation was tabled again by city council Monday to await further information compiled for the Canadian Federation of Mayors and Municipalities.

It is expected to arrive before council's next business session, September 8.

Meanwhile, a preliminary report by that national body was received and filed. It gives unqualified support to the health measure.

The preliminary study was made by the Health League of Canada, fluoridation committee, based on replies to questionnaires submitted to heads of department of preventive medicine of 92 North American Universities.

The report ends with a resolution by the Health League as follows:

"Resolved that in view of the overwhelming mass of evidence received by our committee on fluoridation from all over North America emphasizing the importance of fluoridation of communal water supplies for the prevention of caries and also of overwhelming evidence the effect that fluoridation in approved quantities does no harm to the human organism, this association... immediately goes on record as endorsing, without qualification, the fluoridation of communal water supplies in quantities recommended by official departments of health."

Of the preventive medicine departments queried, 86 endorsed fluoridation, six said they were not qualified to express an opinion at the moment. None said fluoridation would not prevent caries and none expressed an opinion that fluoridation in proper quantities would harm the human organism.

The mayor last month threatened to veto a move by council to approve a recommendation by the Victoria-Esquamalt Union Board of Health for fluoridation of local drinking water.

Council decided not to press the issue until the reports of the mayors' group was at hand. Mayor Harrison said the federation was undecided on the matter.
